Addenda:

The specifics of my duties with CIA are classified, but it can be said that they involved liaison between the Agency and civilian institutions at the top management level, and with individuals whose expertise contributed to the Agency's intelligence mission. In general, my entire work experience since college has emphasized personal contacts in widely divergent areas of activity and, in connection with these, an extensive use of the written word. Civic activities have centered on the Guilford Free Library, of which I have been vice president of the Board, and on which I continue as a member of its Finance Committee. More recently, I was asked to serve on the Library Building Committee, the latter being a non-party Town appointment involving creation of a new library.
